Summary of key findings for parents

This provision is good

- Relationships between staff and children are sensitive and caring, which supports children's emotional security.
- Staff build good relationships with parents. Parents speak highly of the club and are kept well informed about both the club and their children.
- The manager works in both the club and the host school. This supports continuity for the children and parents.
- Children are keen to attend the club. They make friends, play enthusiastically and laugh often.
- The provider is committed to offering the best-quality care for children and values the support of her dedicated team of staff. She is clear about the strengths of the club and knows how to implement improvements.
- Staff do not make the best possible use of opportunities to promote healthy eating, in particular during cooking club.

What the setting needs to do to improve further

To further improve the quality of the early years provision the provider should:

- strengthen opportunities for children to learn about healthy eating.

Inspection activities

- The inspector spoke with the provider, the manager, the staff and children.
- The inspector took account of the views of parents through discussion and their written comments.
- The inspector and manager jointly evaluated a planned activity.
- The inspector looked at the range of indoor and outdoor activities provided and observed the interactions between staff and children.
- The inspector looked at the areas of the club used by the children and discussed risk assessment with the manager.

Inspection findings

Effectiveness of leadership and management is good

Safeguarding is effective. There is rigorous recruitment, vetting and induction of staff. As a result, staff are suitable and understand their roles and responsibilities. Good organisation means staff know who to contact if they have concerns about a child. Staff receive appropriate training to keep them up to date with safeguarding issues. Staff receive effective supervision, which aids them in reviewing and developing their practice. There are good systems for receiving feedback from parents, staff and children. These are used to support improvements. For example, parents want their children to have support with their homework. So, in response, the club has planned a homework club.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment is good

There is a well-organised procedure for collecting children from the host school. Staff liaise very closely with teachers to share information about children's learning and well-being. This contributes towards ensuring children are settled, assured and happy in the transition to the club. Staff strongly encourage children to 'have a voice' and their interests lead the activities. This helps to motivate both young and older children to play, learn and achieve. Children build good social skills. For example, 'friendship groups' support older children to guide younger children. Staff make good use of young children's play to promote their communication skills, vocabulary and imagination, for example when using 'touch and feel boxes' while learning about dinosaurs. Staff promote children's physical development effectively. Older children thoroughly enjoy the team games and younger children run around enthusiastically in the fresh air, using their imagination.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare are good

Staff create an inclusive environment that reflects the diverse needs of all children. The manager knows the children exceptionally well, which enables her to meet their individual needs effectively. Children have positive relationships with the kind and friendly staff. Staff consistently use praise and encouragement, which helps to raise children's self-esteem and confidence. Children make friends with each other and willingly share and take turns. Staff are excellent role models for behaviour. Children listen, show respect for each other and are clear about the rules. Parents comment that the club provides a safe and stimulating environment and their children thoroughly enjoy attending.
